In 2013, Barbara Mancini was arrested and prosecuted in Pennsylvania on the charge of aiding the attempted suicide of her dying 93-year old father after handing him his prescribed morphine four days before his death.

A hospice nurse and police ignored his written advanced directives. He was then hospitalized and treated in defiance of his end-of-life wishes.

Barbara's prosecution lasted a year. It garnered national attention, and strong criticism throughout the media.

She will discuss with us her case and the implications for all who are facing end-of-life decisions.

Sponsored by the Northwest Village Network. For more information go to www.northwestvillagenetwork.org or call 215-247-0457.
